SPY'S PARADISE

—was the correct description of Washington, D.C., when he was picking up military secrets there, according to Stig Wennerstrom.

Stig is the personable Swede whom a court in his native land last June found to have been a Soviet spy since 1948. He is serving a life sentence.

Wennerstrom Revelations He is now revealed, by the Senate Internal Security subcommittee, to have testified that gathering vital information in Washington was no trick at all, and the same as to U.S. military installations all over the country.

As Swedish air attaché in Washington 1952-57, Wennerstrom was virtually never challenged when he pried into U.S. military secrets and defense plants. On at least one occasion, he slipped some vital microfilm to a confederate of his in the Pentagon itself.

By the way, how is security in Washington nowadays?
